

CANRI Catch Up

Thank you to everyone who has taken part in our variety of events and efforts this academic year as part of the Community and Natural Resource Institute (CANRI)! We look forward to continue to build relationships and create opportunities for research and engagement related to human and community dimensions of natural resources.

Jessica & Courtney

SOME HIGHLIGHTS OF 2021-2022

SOCIALS

We got to know each other better, talk about our exciting research and ideas for CANRI, and enjoy local trails with a fall colors hike and winter snowshoe.

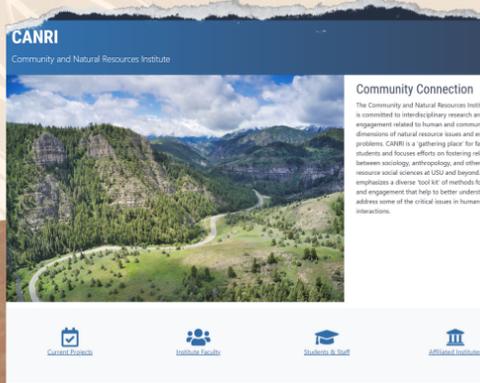

SPEAKERS

We hosted SEVEN USU and non-USU speakers, from academic and non-academic backgrounds, and all providing useful insights on research and engagement.

COMMUNICATION

We have sought to improve our communication and outreach with our updated website (send us any updates you would like to see!), new listserv (canri-mail@googlegroups.com; share any events or news relevant to the group!), and periodic newsletters.

SWAG

To celebrate our new logo, we just ordered some new stickers! Let us know if you would like a couple for your laptop and drink container (canri@usu.edu)!

Based on feedback, next year we plan to focus on the following:

- Work with CHaSS Development Officers to secure ongoing funding for research and engagement work through alumni donations.
- Continue to invite speakers, both virtually and in-person, with additional emphasis on internal speakers.
- Continue to provide opportunities for socialization across departments, between faculty and grad students, and with community members.

LET US KNOW:

Is there anything you would like to see us plan for the next academic year? If so email: canri@usu.edu.

College of Humanities & Social Sciences
Community & Natural Resource Institute
Utah State University.