

Moyle Q. Rice Lecture Series

What Would a University Lose If Writing Studies Disappeared?

Friday • September 18 • 1:30-2:30

Mehdi Heravi Center Room 201
Carolyn Irish Tanner Pavilion

Refreshments provided!

Scan QR code for Zoom link

Dr. Ti Macklin

Director of First-Year Writing at Boise State University and holds a Ph.D. in Rhetoric and Composition

Ti Macklin is Director of First-Year Writing at Boise State University, where she teaches and leads work in writing pedagogy, assessment, and student learning. Her scholarship focuses on how students learn and develop as writers, with particular interests in writing assessment, student agency, and the experiences of both undergraduate and graduate students. An award-winning teacher and longtime writing program administrator, Ti is especially interested in creating learning environments that support students as writers and help faculty navigate the changing landscape of writing instruction.

College of Arts & Sciences
UtahStateUniversity